

Americans with Disabilities Act and 508 Compliance Benefit

The Americans with Disabilities Act, signed into law in 1990, prohibits discrimination against workers who are disabled in the workplace. Similarly, Section 508 laws require that agencies in the Federal Government and those who do business with these agencies make their electronic and information technology accessible to people with disabilities. While understanding the complexity of ADA/Section 508 requirements is a difficult task, providing ZoomText to your employees is an easy decision.

For over two decades, ZoomText has helped companies comply with ADA and Section 508 requirements for employees with low vision along with those who simply need a little help seeing their computer screens. Our software is used by companies of all sizes to help their workers reduce eyestrain and fatigue, also known as Computer Vision Syndrome, and make computing more comfortable and productive while proactively addressing potential compliance issues. ADA and Section 508 compliance requirements are constantly changing so why not get ahead of the curve by offering ZoomText to all of your employees all the time?

The ZoomText Enterprise License allows you to deliver ZoomText to everyone in your organization at a fraction of the per-person cost of other ZoomText licensing options. And by deploying ZoomText across your organization, you are assured that the solution is always available wherever and for whoever needs it.

The World Health Organization estimates 161 million people worldwide have a visual impairment. Of these, 37 million are blind and 124 million have low vision. In addition, according to a BLR Human Resources training series, one in six Americans have some form of disability. Workers with disabilities have been shown to be just as productive; taking simple steps to accommodate their needs makes them more loyal and committed employees.

“I have been using ZoomText for over eight years now, and I could not do my job as a Research Officer without it. It is a great program and I highly recommend it for anyone who has low vision. Thanks ZoomText!”
